Thousands Hold Norviolent Protest at Bonn Defense Ministry Participants Outnumber By Police; Roads Kept Open

BONN - Several thousand young anti-nuclear demonstrators staged daylong sit-down protests Friday on the access roads to the West German Defense Ministry outside Bonn, and hundreds let themselves be carried off by police in what looked like a carefully prepared spectacle of mutual restraint.

There was tension and at times anger, but no serious violence.

Friday's demonstration was part of a 10-day protest in West Germany against the deployment of 572. Pershing-2 and cruise missiles by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization. The deployment is to begin in West Germany, Britain and Italy

The organizers had billed Friday's operation as a blockade of the ministry, saying they would cut off access to officials and others and thus prevent the installations from functioning. The government had served notice that force would be used if necessary to keep access roads open and assure normal op-

The result was a blockade that remained symbolic, Police, far outnumbering the demonstrators, let them settle on their mats and plastic planks on one of the major access roads all day while keeping the other seven entrances open. > About 200 to 300 demonstrators were foreibly removed at the point where a road entering the ministry complex leaves the superhighway leading to Bonn.

Policemen in green uniforms, helmets dangling from their belts, stood around them. There was talk and some joking back and forth. At one point, one of the young demon-strators read long excerpts from the West German Constitution. There was some singing and chanting of peace slogans.

Both the police and the coordinating committee of the peace ent have been anxious to keep the 10 days of demonstrations

Police units have been practicing for weeks how to carry away demcostrators with a minimum of force. The protesters, too, have been rehearsing how to be carried away without panic or violence. Up to 15,000 policemen were reported deployed at the Defense Ministry. No soldiers were in sight. The number of demonstrators was estimated at 3,000 by West German television.

Police officials had made it clear in advance that they regarded deployment of an overwhelming number of officers as one of the best ways to prevent violence

There was no sign Friday of the "autonomous" groups that are bent on violence and attempted to disrupt a similar protest in the northem port city of Bremerhaven last

The first protesters showed up outside the Defense Ministry shortly after 3 A.M. on Friday. The first ministry employees were driven into the ministry at 5 A.M., long before the usual start of the working day. The protest ended in the

Britain and France Affirm Missile Plan Commitment

LONDON - President Francois Mitterrand of France and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher of Britain reasserted Friday that NATO must deploy new American missiles unless there is an agreement in the Geneva arms talks. Concluding a two-day annual meeting, the two leaders said at a news conference that they were in virtual accord un East-West issues and arms control. But neither indicated substantial progress toward resolving financial issues in the Enropean Community.

Referring to the U.S. Soviet talks on intermediate-range nuclear weapons, Mrs. Thatcher said, We both resolved that should the arms talks not result in zero option at the end of this year, the cruise and Pershings must be deployed." Under the zero option, the initial U.S. proposal in the talks, the Soviet Union would dismantle its intermediate-range missiles aimed at Western Europe, and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization would abandon its plan to deploy

[Mr. Romberg said, "The Nica-raguan proposals recite some gen-eral principles that every one could agree on," but added that they lacked specific means of verification and did not appear to address the full range of issues.]

There may be several important hitches to U.S. acceptance of the Nicaraguan proposals. The treaties would require the United States to halt all military maneuvers in Cen-tral America within 30 days of their signing and to shut all U.S. military bases and training facilities in Hon-duras and El Salvador within 90

The new negociating package consists of four proposals: nonaggression treaties between Nicaragua and the United States and between Nicaragua and Honduras, a broader nonaggression treaty to be signed by all Central American governments, and a "draft accord to contribute to the peaceful solution of the armed conflict in the Republic of El Salvador."

Economic Decline Transforms Brazil's Swagger to Despair By Warren Hoge New York Times Service

RIO-DE JANEIRO --- One morning while joggers passed by on the shorefrom and rush-hour traffic began to back up, a fully dressed man walked purposefully to the beach in Rio's wealthy Lebion neighborhood. Heplaced a small Bible at the water's edge, dove into the breakers and

He left no oote to explain his desperation; perhaps be reasoned that none was needed. Hopelessness, a sentiment considered out of character or even subversive in Brazil until recently, now seems to be the national mood.

"In the 60 years in which I have been working in Brazil, this is the first time that I find my feelings dominated by pessimism," wrote Adolphu Bloch in Manchete, a popular magazine of which he is the founder and director. Headlines tell almost daily of bankruptcy of major companies, overpasses have become shelters for dispossessed families and mobs of poor are looting food stores. There are no unemployment lines, but in Brazil there are no out-of-work benefits to line up for. Rio remains staggeringly beautiful, but there is a sense of decay. People express hopes that the continued tighten-ing of the economy to ease the country's indebtedness will not provoke a social convulsion, but no one sees a way out. Brazilians have never shown a bent for organized redress of grievances. The conditions in which most of them live have long been the kind that have produced revolu-

The nature of Brazil's decline is distinct from that of its neighbors unt only because, with $90 billion in loans, it owes the most but also because the hopes that are being dashed were literally boundless.

When every centimeter of coastline in the city had become occupied years ago. Rio's builders filled in the sea and extended civilization into the bays. On the southern border, Brazilians inaugurated the world's largest hydro-electric dam, a 12,600-kilowatt behemoth 62 stories high and more than 90 city blocks long. São Paulo became the developing world's most productive city.

While local customs recalled many of those of the United States with local brands of cowboys and gold prospectors, fast-food stands, rock music and the growing dominance of the automobile, the country's foreign po-icy-makers cast off longtime fealty to the Americans. The Brazilians participating in this heady activity have a variety of ethnic backgrounds. Brazil's Attorney General is Ibrahim Abi-Ackel, the head of its petroleum monopoly is Shipeaki Ueki, the scion of one of the oldest comp is Israel Klabin. Walter Clark is a leading theater and film producer, the director of the National Banker's Association is Jorge Bornhausen, the most famous industrial family is named Matarazzo, and three-quarters of the residents of the traditional cultural capital, Bahia, are of

This created a sense of optimism almost as big as Brazil itself, the fifth largest naoon in the world. Brazilians felt that their jeitinho, a Portuguese slang word connoting street-smart resourcefulness, gave them an edge over their

Now. Brazil faces the certainty that it will be unable to meet payments on its foreign debt without a continuing commitment to susterity that has spelled a halt to its nation-building ambitions.

This is not all bad. Brash conviction covered up a best of ills from unthrottled government and business corruption to poverty, shortages of essential services and an inattention to education unmatched in even the poorest

From 1968 until the beginning of the political "opening" in the late 1970s, Brazilians endured a military rule that resorted to all the sordid practices of jackboot dictatorship like banishments, torture and disappearances. The 19 years of military rule have intensified the unequal distribution of riches. There are more than 20 million abandoned children in Brazil, Infant mortality has climbed to 250 ont of 1,000 in the most poverty-ridden part of the country, drought victims are starving or trying to live off descrit rats and chameleons. Brazilians are free to read about such things in their denounced in public. This recent phenomenou has produced what could be the germ of a oew and more lasting kind of hopefulness.

Recently, Brazilians raised millions of dollars and thousands of tons of food and clothing for victims of floods in the south and droughts in the northeast. Two campaigns, organized by television octworks, accomplished what the corruption. The crisis has caught Brazil at a critical moment in its liberalization program, which has drawn admiration from abroad. It has brought the freeing of political prisoners, the lifting of censorship, elections last November for every office but the presidency and an amnesty for thousands who were exiled or stripped of their civil rights. But, at the very moment that economic necessity is demanding coherent leadership, the political illegitimacy of the military-selected president. General João Baptista Figueiredo, has been shown up by the fact that all other public officeholders were elected. General Figueiredo's successor is to be a civilian chosen in January 1985 by an electoral college controlled by the government party rather than in a free election. More than percent of Brazilians believe there ought to be direct presidential elections, according to polls. General Figueiredo's firmness in proceeding with liberalization in the face of a clandestine bombing campaign and labor unrest earned him great popularity in the first half of his six-year term. But that same discipline has proved unequal to the present task of political negotiation with elected tepresentatives expressing the dismay of their constituencies. He told associates that, if he could have his way, he would give up his job, go home and leave Brazil's immediate future to Janio Quadros, another president of Brazil who felt frustrated, did just that in 1961. The result was a slide into chaos, a military coup and the beginning of the cycle whose melancholy end is being played out today.

He also demanded that Lebanon's Christian president, Amin

Israeli Poll Puts Opposition Ahead

TEL AVIV (AP) — The opposition Labor Party has pulled well ahead of Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's ruling Likud bloc, according to an opinion poll taken during Israel's economic crisis.

The sampling of 1,177 persons, taken by the Dahaf Agency and published Friday in the daily Yedioth Ahronoth, showed that Labor, with a 43.3 percent share of support, would lead Likud by 52 seats to 46 in the 120-member Knesset, or parliament, if a vote were taken now.
In the last poll by Dahaf, taken after Menachem Begin announced his resignation as prime minister at the end of Angust, the figures were reversed, with Likud leading 52-46. Labor currently has 50 seats in parliament and Likud 46, but Likud is ideologically closer to the majority of the small parties and is able to govern by coalition.

AIDS Cases Said to Double in Europe AARHUS, Denmark (Reuters) - The number of Europeans with acquired immune deficiency syndrome, or AIDS, has more than doubled this year to 164, but evidence shows the general public has little cause for alarm, medical experts said Friday at a conference sponsored by the World Health Organization.

Ninety-four cases were reported in France, 38 in Belgium, 42 in West Germany, 24 in Britain, 17 in Switzerland, 13 in Denmark and 13 in he Netherlands. Czechoslovakia, with two cases, was the only country of Eastern Europe to report the existence of the disease. Forty-two cases have been found in people who came to Europe from Central Africa,

AIDS was first detected in 1979 in the United States, which has the largest number of AIDS cases, about 2,500. The disease destroys a person's ability to fight infection and leads to tumors and skin cancer, and often death. Its cause is unknown, but researchers believe the disorder is spread by sexual contact, contaminated drug injections and

CIA Ex-Agent Guilty of Murder Plots

NEW YORK (NYT) - Edwin P. Wilson, a former agent of the Central Intelligence Agency, was convicted Thursday night of at-tempting to murder two prosecu-tors and six witnesses.

He asked another inmate, Wayne Trimmer, to find a "hit man" to commit the murders, but the inmate informed federal authorities. Then, the charges continued, Mr. Wilson offered to pay $500,000 to two other inmates to arrange the murder of Mr. Trimmer for informing. Engene Neal Kaplan, the chief prosecutor, told the jury that Mr. Wilson had become "a desperate man" after being lured out of Libya and arrested for illegal arms shipments.

Doctors Offer Evidence Of U.S. Hunger Problem

By Robert Pear

WASHINGTON - Three doctors testifying before a congressio-nal subcommittee have presented new medical evidence of hunger and malnutrition in the United States.

The evidence was given Thursday by Dr. Victor W. Sidel, president of the Public Health Association of New York City; Dr. Agnes Lattimer of Chicago, president of the Illinois chapter of the American Academy of Pediarrics, and Dr. J. Larry Brown, a lecturer at the Harvard School of Public Health.

Dr. Sidel reported results of interviews conducted by medical stulents with more than 400 people at food pantries, soup kitchens, welfare offices and health clinics in New York State. Many of these people, he said, were "eating less than what is recommended to meet energy needs."

On the average, he said, their caloric intake was well below the norm for other people and below the lower end of the range recom-mended by the National Academy

Dr. Sidel, who is also a professor at the Albert Einstein College of Medicine, said, "Among the people govern the country effectively be-

be the major reason for poor diets." He and the other witnesses appeared before the House Agricul-tinte subcommittee on nutrition, headed by Representative Leon E. Panetta, a California Democrat.

Dr. Lattimer said that in the last two years, there had been a 24-percent increase in admissions to Cook County Hospital in Chicago for such symptoms related to mal-nutrition as abnormally low weight and height, wrinkled skin, diarrhea and dehydration.

Dr. Brown said pediatricians at teaching hospitals affiliated with the Harvard Medical School had also observed an increase in the number of children admitted for malnutrition or "failure to thrive."

Hunger has emerged in the last few months as a national issue with political implications. In August, President Ronald Reagan established an advisory committee, the Task Force on Food Assistance, to investigate reports of hunger. Mr. Reagan said he found such reports "perplexing" because poor people were estitled to receive food

However, Dr. Brown said his research indicated that food stamp allotments were, in many cases, inadequate. "Most of the emergency facilities report that food stamp al-lotments last only to the third week of each month," he said. Reagan administration officials have suggested that in such cases, food stamp recipients did not plan their budgets properly.

Dr. Sidel reported that 40 per-cent of all the people in his study the other [Mr. Mondale] cannot defeat Ronald Reagan and cannot said they were eating less than they thought they should. One-third of the parents said they sometimes went without food so their children cause he is too closely tied to the big spending, special-interest poli-cies of the past," Mr. Hart said. Dr. Sidel, Dr. Lattimer and Dr. Brown all said they beieved hunger was increasing, although they had not been collecting data long enough to show long-term trends. Regardless of whether the problem was growing. they said, it is serious.

Reagan Said He Meant No Offense clared at an impasse by both sides late Wednesday night after almost In Reply on King and Communism

WASHINGTON — President Ronald Reagan asked the widow of the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. on Friday to take no offense to his remarks Wednesday about whether King had been a Communist sympathizer. But in a personal letter written 19 days ago, it was isclosed, Mr. Reagan said the perception of King held by many was based on an image, not reality."

In that letter, Mr. Reagan expressed reservations about creating a legal holiday in King's honor. On Wednesday night, a few hours after the Senate voted overwhelmingly to establish a King holiday, the president said at a news conference he would sign the bill.

Mr. Reagan's letter replied to one he had received from the former governor of New Hampshire, Meldrim Thomson, who asked the president to veto the bill. In the letter, Mr. Thomson called King "a man of immoral character whose frequent association with leading agents of communism is well established."

Mr. Reagan replied, "I have the same reservations you have, but here the perception of too many people is based on an image, not mans and Britons, are staging long-planned marches against nuclear missiles. They blame mostly America for having to live with new variants of The Bomb, not even crediting America, or The Bomb, for their right to march. They want the sympathy and support of the many Americans who are equally dismayed by the nuclear arms race and by a U.S. government that has been less than vigorous in pursuing arms control. The marchers deserve some sympathy, but not much support.

They are not choosing life over death, as many of them contend, or Red over dead, as many of their critics charge. They are frightened by the idea of deterrence, of preserving peace by a balance of terror. Their anxiety is justified, but the terror can only be controlled, not eliminated. To let public anxiety in the West become an instrument of Soviet military policy is nn way to reach a safer balance.

As clear majorities of West German, British and Italian voters have recognized this year, the alliance is better off with The Bomb than without. And after four years of negotiations in which the Soviet posture has been far more negative than America's, the allies are better off deploying new missiles in Europe than not. In delay, as the marchers demand, would expose the allies as incapable of coordinating their defenses and diplomacy. It would reward the Soviet drive to divide the West, and thus gravely damage the diplomacy of arms control. With the start of NATO deployments, the Russians will step up their war of nerves. They may threaten to leave the Geneva talks or roll more missiles nearer Europe's heart. But no military measures on either side can significantly alter the power balance. These missile "modernizations" have become a test of Soviet Throngs of West Europeans, mostly Ger- and American political strength on the Continent. Only when the Kremlin concedes failure at undermining the Western governments is it likely to bargain with them properly.

The Enropean peace movement, in the view of one of its British founders, E.P. Thompson, is experiencing "death of a sort." But not, as he contends, because the West has cleverly manipulated the Geneva negotiations to produce a NATO public relations success. The West's record in diplomacy and public relations looks good only because the Kremlin's record and its inept handling of the South Korean airliner affair have been so much worse. The question is why. Are the Russians really as concerned as they pretend about the deployment of 572 American warheads? Even if completed, the deployment would increase the number aimed at Soviet territory by only about 6 percent. Are they worried most about 108 Pershing-2 missiles in West Germany — 10 minutes from the Moscow region? If so, most of that deployment can still be prevented.

The Enropean governments would have jumped at the kind of agreement explored informally in the Geneva woods last year: to limit the West to 75 cruise missile launchers with 300 warheads while the Soviet force in Europe is reduced to 75 SS-20s with 225 warheads. But Moscow holds firm against any deployment of medium-range U.S. missiles to match its array on the Continent. And that is a prescription for splitting the allies' defense arrangements from America's. It is a political challenge, not a serious reckoning of arms. Neither side really needs new nuclear weapous in Europe. But nn reductions will be achieved until the Russians recognize that there really is a cohesive Western side.

However bad the situation in Grenada previously, it is now worse. The leftist regime that seized power on that small island in 1979 has itself fallen victim to violence, and the undifferentiated U.S. hostility to leftists in the Western Hemisphere has been rewarded with a hard lurch to the dogmatic and pro-Soviet left. Whether Prime Minister Maurice Bishop's regime could have been lured into moderation will never be known, but his killing suggests the inadequacy of policies that seek to influence leftist regimes by shunning them.

Some responsibility for Grenada's abandonment of democratic forms belongs to Mr. Bishop's predecessor, the quirky authoritarian Sir Eric Gairy. He combined strong-arm rule with an exotic foreign policy geared to his fascination with flying sancers. Mr. Bishop's New Jewel Movement, strongly influenced by the New Left and Black Power thinking of the 1960s, promised something better. But in four years it disappointed hopes for democratic change and traded flying sancers for un-abashed avowal of Cuban and Soviet causes.

Recently Mr. Bishop had begun to talk of evolution toward a system mixing some free enterprise and constitutional democracy with elements of Cuban-style Socialism. But that opening was ignored by the Reagan administration, which refused to exchange ambassadors or even give Mr. Bishop a proper hearing when he visited Washington this year. In any case, Mr. Bishop's drift proved intol-

President Reagan has voiced concern about the military implications of a large new airport that Grenadians say is intended to accommodate tourism. That was a matter of concern worth discussing, not merely denouncing.

The still more important issue for the United States is how to respond to annoying yet essentially unthreatening radical regimes. Events in Grenada suggest that more sophisticated strategies are in order.

What Defense Do the Europeans Want?

PARIS — West German demonstrations against American intermediate-range missiles are forcing some difficult questions to be faced. How are West Germany and Western Europe going to be defended in the future? Can the Western alliance go on unchanged?

Obviously, the present West German govern-ment will honor the NATO decision to deploy American missiles, given Soviet unwillingness to interrupt deployment of SS-20s. Just as obvious is that a great many Germans are deeply uncomfortable with their dependence upon the United States for security, and with the way the United States exercises that responsibility.

In France, always sensitive to what goes on in Germany, there has been an important reaction. On successive days, two major French politi-cians, one of the right and the other of the left, have called for new nuclear security arrangements for Western Europe. The head of the neo-Gaullist party, the RPR, and mayor of Paris, Jacques Chirac, on a visit to Bonn on Tuesday, condemned Europe's "singular passivity" and said that "it is always dangerous to depend on others for what one should do oneself."

Mr. Chirac went on to say that "in less than five years, with new multiple warheads, French and British nuclear forces will have augmented considerably. They will represent a decisive deterrent force. At that point it becomes possible to imagine a European-American nuclear deterrent to guarantee the security of Western Europe. But one cannot think of that without direct German participation at a responsible level."

This is a guarded, qualified statement, particularly in its allusion to a continued American role. It is nonetheless interesting the more so for a and Paris? The question cannot be answered second statement made the following day by with certainty. Would Paris and London risk

By William Pfaff

Jean-Pierre Chevenement, the leader of the left wing of France's Socialist Party, a former senior minister in the present government and certainly a candidate for the leadership of French socialism when François Mitterrand steps down.

Asked about Europe's security, Mr. Chevenement said this should be provided by Europeans. Emphasizing West Germany's non-nuclear position, he argued that a solution should be sought in part by means of a "zone of low pressure" in Central Europe but in part, as well, by the French and British nuclear deterrents.

The idea of lowering the pressure in Central Europe has been around for a long time and usually presumes some form either of political neutralization or of denuclearization of the two Germanys. Neutralization scarcely seems worth discussion, since so long as East Germany is communist and West Germany is a parliamentary democracy, neither can be neutral in a European war. Germany, unhappily, is where that war would be fought, being the place where the two sides face one another.

Dennclearization is another matter, a very complicated one but possible to imagine. It is perhaps more easily imagined than a West Germany "responsibly" associated with the French and British nuclear deterrents yet without possessing nuclear weapons.

The latter notion stumbles on the problem that now exists with respect to the American nuclear guarantee of Europe, Would Washing-ton risk New York and Chicago to save Berlin survival in order to defend the West Germans? A third French voice has been raised, that of General Pierre Gallois, the strategist behind the development of France's nuclear force. He notes that by the early 1990s France and Britain together will possess the capacity to destroy 2,000 targets in the Soviet Union. Even France alone will be in a position to paralyze the military apparatus of the Soviet Union by precise attacks. without - initially, at least - attacking Soviet cities." He says, "one can therefore envisage a substitute for the American guarantee." This is not a subject Germans will comfortably debate, since they are at the epicenter, so to speak, and there are limits on what they can do. Yet a great many Germans have made plain their restlessness with the U.S. presence and their dislike of the American system of nuclear de-fense for West Germany and for Europe.

Their anxieties are comprehensible, but they feed those currents of opinion in the United States which — equally comprehensibly — con-demn Europeans for their less than total enthusiasm for U.S. policies and would like to see American troops brought home.

What do the West Germans themselves want? No doubt many who demonstrate against American nuclear missiles believe in the possibility of benevolent and privileged neutrality amidst the world's storms. But what about serious Germans? How would they provide for their own security and that of Europe?

The French certainly do not have the final answers, but they are addressing the problem. And there will have to be a solution, because one day -- someday -- the Americans will go home. International Herald Tribune.

Ideas for NATO While Deployment Proceeds

C AMBRIDGE, Massachusetts

— Unless an arms control agreement makes deployment unnecessary, NATO will begin in December to base 41 of its new medium-range nuclear missiles in Europe. Prospects for such an agreement look dim, and West European governments will be under through agreement in Geneva, what could NATO do to try to neutralize the turmoil that may lie shead?

the end of World War II the international balance of power has been largely determined by the political alliance of Western Europe and Ja-pan with the United States, although geographically both are next to the Soviet Union. Not surprising-ly, the splitting of that alliance has been a consistent Soviet goal.

The second goal is to avoid war in Europe by maintaining a credible, stable deterrent. The new weapons make a useful but minor contribution toward that goal. Alliance co-Would halting deployment of the Pershing-2s and cruises serve both objectives? Since their main significance today is more political than military, a delay would be justified —only if the allies requested it. So far there is no sign of such a request.

The principal European govern-ments believe Soviet bargaining in Geneva reflects hope that public opinion will destroy the Western consensus over deployment without the Kremlin having to pay a price. Since full deployment of the 572 missiles is not to be finished until 1988, serious bargaining for limitation or removal may still take place after initial deployment.

To phunge ahead and totally ignore public protests could be costly. Opinion is divided in most European countries, with many in the younger generation skeptical of the value of nuclear weapons. Moreover, polls show that a wide segment of West European opinion mistrusts the Reagan administration's nuclear doctrine.

NATO could go ahead with deployment but formally declare that it would never use nuclear weapons first. If a declaration of no first use really reduced the risks of nuclear war, it might be a step worth taking. But most West European foreign-policymakers do not want America to make such a declaration. In their view, America's nuclear guarantee has helped counterbalance the huge Soviet conventional forces.

Europeans do not want nuclear war, but neither do they want a conventional war that might kill 50 million people and leave the Continent devastated. Many fear that a weakening of America's miclear guarantee would make conventional war more likely. Moreover, they believe that escalation of a conventional war would be the most likely path to nuclear war.

Another approach holds more promise, and NATO governments are close to agreement on it, unless there is backsliding by Washington. NATO would hold to its timetable and retain its willingness to negotiate on the missiles, but would unilaterally remove many short-range weapons such as nuclear mines, miclear artillery and nuclear anti-aircraft shells, which would have to be used quickly before being overrun or destroyed in battle. Some Americans have insisted on negotiating reduction of such arms with the Soviet Union. But the credibility of these arms as bargaining chips is limited, and negotiations might ac-tually slow down doing what ought to be done anyway.

A better plan would be for NATO to announce, as the first of the 572 intermediate-range nuclear missiles begin to be deployed, that it will begin to cut in half the number of U.S. mclear arms in Europe by removing some 3,000 short-range weapons, which are destabilizing. NATO should treat such reductions as practical steps in a policy of no first use of military force and no early use of nuclear weapons.

This policy would not mollify all protest, but it would provide a sound basis for reassuring the average European while meeting America's nbjectives of alliance cohesion. and averting war in Europe.

In 1981 the average salary of a member of the Air Line Pilots Association totaled $68,926, about three times the median family income. When competent pilots work for $40,000, those paid $80,000 or $100,000, look overpaid. But all those $80,000 pilots have built their lives on $80,000 salaries. It underpins their sense of self-worth and their mortgage payments. If they suddenly become $40,000 pilots, who says they don't suffer?

. The predicament of the pilots sheds light on deeper problems. You cannot watch the airlines' turnoil the pressure on pilots' salaries is but one result -without sensing that it is part of something larger. Competi-tion has intensified in a multitude of industries, and Americans are not easy with the results.

Everyone favors competition's economic benefits: consumer choice. price rivalry. But no nne likes the disruptive effects. All protected markets create vested interests. People and firms adjust to existing rules. Once markets open up, rules change, and those who prospered under the old may suffer under the new.

The pain of this is now becoming increasingly widespread as a variety of factors — new technologies, increased imports, deliberate government deregulation - spread competition into industries where it has been minimal or nonexistent.

Item: Although deregulation has helped railroads, it has burt some shippers. The railroads' new freedom to close weak branch lines has deprived some Midwestern grain eleva-tors of freight service; farmers now have to truck their grain to more distant elevators for consolidation into larger, more efficient trains.

Item: For years, the Federal Comminications Commission propped up long-distance telephone rates to subsidize residential rates. The basic cost of residential service is about $28 a customer, but the monthly charge totals roughly $11. Long distance and other services provide the rest, but increasing competition for long distance traffic is now forcing the FCC to reduce the local subsidy.

Item: Banking deregulation has contributed to high interest rates. For years, government ceilings on savings account interest rates forced many depositors in accept low rates. The removal of those restrictions means higher returns for savers but adds to the burdens of debt-laden farmers, firms and consumers.

Item: Since trucking deregulation in 1980, price competition among truckers has intensified dramatically; independent pricing actions have increased by a factor of eight. High-cost companies with well-paid union drivers have lost business to low-cost. non-union operators. The Teamsters Union estimates that the number of workers under its National Freight Agreement has declined by roughly one-third from 300,000 in 1979.

The sheltering of markets involves ubsidies and privileges. Some, like the FCC subsidy, are deliberate, while others are accidental. In the 1930s, for example, sirlines agreed to a pilot pay formula tied to, among other things, plane weight. As jets got bigger, pilots pay skyrocketed. Tight federal regulation permitted this by preventing new airlines from forming and by allowing old ones to pass higher costs along in higher fares.

Changed market rules upset these arrangements. Since deregulation in 1978, the number of America's major airlines has increased from 25 to 44. The share of traffic of the big carriers has shrunk from 91 to 79 percent. Price competition from low-cost eartiers has inflicted large losses and forced high-cost carriers to cut ex-penses. Bankrupt Braniff and Continental are the most obvious results. On an individual level, this is monstrously unfair. The average Continental stewardess or pilot simply benefited from a regulatory system that suddenly has been yanked away. Ditto for the home phone customer, the abandoned Midwestern elevator operator or the unemployed Teamster. Imports' effects on industries seem only slightly less arbitrary. Competition, then, naturally begets agitation for protection. Airline unions and the Teamsters want regulation restored because it underpinned their bargaining power. Likewise, steel workers and auto workers urge import protection. Many congressmen now favor legislation preventing reduced long-distance subsidies for home phone service.

Treat these arguments skeptically. They are largely self-serving. Old habits are not easily altered by new realities. This year major airline unious (not the pilots) received a three-year increase from TWA ex- competition will mean increased deceeding 30 percent. That completely ignored the industry's economics. mands for protection. designed to provide security. Corporate bankruptcies intended to break labor contracts may inspire workers to break the same contracts. Government confronts the contradictions. While paying lip service to competition's virtues, citizens want government to shield them against its dismotive effects. Unless these confused notions are clarified, increased

BAGHDAD — The story of the French Super Etendard planes and Exocet missiles makes a better James Bond film than a policy. The trouble is that the scriptwriters can't control the end of the plot

It is now obvious that reports about the planes flying to Iraq early this month did not just reflect jour-nalistic enterprise. The planes left their base in Brittany, and the world was encouraged to believe that Iraq was about to gain a decisive means to shot off Iran's oil exports.

Two days later Iraq announced that unless it could resume regular oil experts, Iran's oil-dollar lifeline would be cut. This reinforced the assumption that the planes had arrived. But they were still in Prance.

The idea behind the French-Iraqi deal, which provoked intense but hidden argument in Paris, was that some drastic threat was needed to force Iran into negotiations to end the cor-rosive three-year-old war. The Iraqis started it, but they are running out of steam. They are ready for a stalemate settlement, which practically every-one else wants. But Ayatollab Khoone ease wants. But Ayatotlah Kho-mein's regime wants victory.

For pecuniary and prestige rea-sons, France was sympathetic to the Iraqi argument early this year that the weapon that sank the British war-ship H.M.S. Sheffield in the Falldand war need only be waved under Tehran's nose to turn the tables. There was also a psychological reason. France's nuclear doctrine is based on what is called "the strategy of the weak to the strong." The thesis is that enough power to threaten a mightier enemy, even though it will not defeat him, is enough to deter attack. The force is not intended to be used. Iraq seemed to be saying the same thing. But then, Paris was reminded that it could not be so sure. Iran announced that if its oil sales were blocked it would block every-

the threat, not the use, of the Super Etendards, the French had a grand idea, If everybody thought the planes were in Iraq, that might serve the same purpose without the risk. There is a lot to be said for this. Bluff is better than bashing. It's an ancient trick, and there are some impressive modern precedents. In 1945 President Harry Truman dropped an atom bomb on Hiroshima. Then he announced a list of 10 Japanese cities and said the United States would drop a bomb on each of them in turn until Japan surrendered.

Tokyo did not respond, so a second bomb was dropped on Nagasaki. The biggest secret was that there were only two bombs. It took another year to produce the third. If Japan had not given up after Nagasaki, the United States was assembling would have been dispatched. The deaths in the fighting would have been several times more than at Hiroshima. Nikita Khrushchev, the Soviet leader, tried a similar ploy in the 1950s. When he sashayed around Europe rattling rockets, proclaiming how many atom bombs he had targeted on each country, the Russians had less than half a dozen in all, it was later ascertained. His threats had. great political impact, but they failed to break the Western alliance.

Truman won, Khrushchev had a draw. The case of Egypt's Gamai Abdel Nasser was a boomerang After ordering the United Nations out of Sinai in 1967 and sending in Egyptian troops, he amounced that he had mined the Strait of Tiran, which controls entrance to the Gulf of Agaba and thus the use of Israel's port of Filat and its access to the Red Sea.

For Israel it was a casus belli, and Israel went to war. It won triumphantly in six days. It occupied not only Sinai, which was returned with the Egyptism peace treaty, but Syria's Golan Heights, the Gaza Strip and the West Bank of the Jordan, after treatment of the Bank of the Jordan, after the strength of the Syria and the Stripe and the Stripe and the West Bank of the Jordan, after the Stripe and th Jordan joined the war. Afterward it was discovered that no mines had been sown in the strait. Nasser's bluff was a disaster for the Arabs. The consequences still threaten would peace 16 years later.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Of Fear and Freedom Regarding "From the Greens, Back-handed Gratitude to Reagan" (IHT, Oct. 7) by Rudolf Bahro:

Mr. Bahro, a leader of West Germany's Greens, unwittingly provides insights into the psychology of the West German peace movement. His claim that the Soviet solution to the infringement of its airspace proves beyond doubt that missile deployment in Western Europe would be suicidal mirrors Soviet paranoia. His analysis makes clear that it is overwhelming fear that is the basic tenet of his movement. But fear that blurs vision and colors judgment is hardly an adequate foundation for wise policy. Fear can paralyze responsible action and encourages behavior that is self-defeat-ing. When coupled with feelings of powerlessness and victimization, fear leads to simplistic solutions, such as

Letters intended for publication should be addressed to the editor and contain the writer's signature, name and address. Brief letters receive priority, and letters may be abridged. We cannot acknowledge all letters, but we value the views of the readers who submit them.

Mr. Bahro's proposal to neutralize Europe — a solution that would leave all of Europe like Poland: a vulnerable pawn to Soviet coercive behavior. At the very least, Western Europe would be the goose laying the golden eggs, indefinitely propping up the Soviet system in exchange for "sovereignty" but not freedom.

Mr. Bahro scapegoats the world and basks in his feeling of being a sacrificial pawn in an internation chess game. Of course, these feelings, whether or not justified by reality, are very real to him and his associates. They have to be taken into account when explaining Western policy vis-à-vis the Soviets. But such feelings cannot be the foundation for policy. That would not solve his problems.

The Finlandization of Europe is an easy solution that clouds the issue and makes international peace and freedom that much more difficult to achieve. In fact, easy solutions -- be they militaristic policies that ignore the need for human rights and freedom to assure stable peace, or disarmament policies that ignore the interdependence of social justice and ting peace everywhere, including Eastern Europe - often lead to that which is feared the most. STANLEY V. BAGINSKI Ridgefield Park, New Jersey.

An Old Suspicion

The shooting down of the South Korean airliner recalls a Russian threat made nearly three quarters of a century ago. Yves Guyot, a French-man, wanted to demonstrate his Biériot at St. Petersburg but a cable to The Washington Post dated Dec. 11, 1909, reported that all attempts to fly there or over other fortified areas were expressly forbidden.

A well known Russian publisher who sought to raise subscriptions to a "national airship fund" had been warned that his proceedings rendered him liable to suspicion - "as aerial craft might be used by revolutionaries and other evil-disposed persons." Thus, "any airship or aeroplane observed within the prohibited area" would be fired upon without notice.

Detail of Turner's "Death - Funeral at Sea."

Turner's Enigmatic Immateriality

· By Michael Gibson International Herald Tribune

PARIS — James Mallord William Turner (1775-1851) appears like a meteoric figure in the history of art and remains one of the most secretive and enigmatic of all Western artists.

He is a virtuoso whenever he deals with subjects that really appeal to him (the human face and figure were not among them), and the current show of about 250 of his works, including some unfin-ished at the Grand Palais through Jan. 16 is a dazzling gathering of visions and revelations. (There also is a show of his watercolors in Bordeaux's Musée des Beaux Arts through Nov. 27, then in Calais Dec. 3 to Jan. 16.)

Turner's father was a Covent Garden hairdresser and his mother, a troubled soul given to uncontrollable rages, was taken to Bedlam-when Turner was still a small boy. Her outbursts must have given the child that inclination to secretiveness that is clearly to be felt in his environment that Turner's genius

Something about Turner escapes us even when his intention seems obvious. This is not true of Claude Lorrain, for instance, whom he admired, nor of Rembrandt, nor even Goya at his strangest. We can participate in Claude's Arcadian participate in Clande's Arcadian Condon — "Heaven's Gate," dream, Rembrandt prompts us to the costly Western that was see the frail humanity of his sub- massacred by New York film crit-

Turner, however, is a visionary who shrouds his visions in light. In ish reviewers. many of his paintings the underlycoherence to the work of any artist film to be missed" were some of the seems, for some reason, out of our reach. Looking at the immateriality of these scenes, it is strange to think that Ruskin, who admired Turner in Wyoming in 1890. The film was above all others, founded his admi-ration on the painter's supposed realism.

He would be admi-booked for a two-week run, but it is still going strong after five weeks. At its debut in November 1980,

Turner's dominant theme is ostensibly light itself - light, the sea. Canby wrote: "Watching the film the elements in all their aspects. is like a forced four-hour walking When he paints Venice, his real tour of one's own living room." subject is not Venice itself, but the light that bathes the city. Yet light York Daily News said then: is the ostensible theme and we can-

All his biographers mention his having himself lashed current rum. "If you thought you to the mast of a ship on the Channel so that he could feel the power around, believe me, you didn't," and the hues of a storm at sea.

Take This might be interpreted as "realism" or "romanticism," but I suspect that it was something more timeless than either: a desire to penetrate beyond the appearances he so carefully studied and to enter that abstract area to which his later paintings so persistently refer.

Turner can also appear perplexing when we begin to look at him more closely as a man, perhaps -! with the Birth because he was that strange Dickensian mixture of the conventional and the idiosyncratic. He wrote the sort of bad doggerel one often sees under corny 19th-century prints, and he occasionally committed it to print in his catalogs. He sought secret solace from bacherlorhood with the girls at Margate, and later

In the final analysis, it may appear that the real content of his work is the language of color. Color, like music, is a pure expressive and emotional value that can be touched by convention, but which speaks to us directly and without the assistance of reason.

One painting, perhaps, allows us to grasp something of Turner's col-or symbolism in a form that allies convention with deep personal feel-"Peace - Funeral at Sea" (1842) refers to the death and buripainter Sir David Wilkie on a quarantined ship off Gibraltar.

All we see is the black ship with its black sails of mourning, made discovered Rembrandt and the the mood of his dark funeral music. But having painted this, he unas a pendant to the first: "War -The Exile and the Limpet," which depicts Napoleon in exile at Saint Helena's meditating, according to Turner's attempt at quatrain, on the relative freedom of the limpet. The apparition of Napoleon's familiar figure (rather awkwardly rendered) in an immaterial, purely lyrical Turner landscape is perfectincongruous, and so, of course, is the invisible limpet. But Turner, who enjoyed bad puns, no doubt enjoyed this eccentric incongruity.

Turner was, in a sense, self-

Even so, one does not expect to stumble across four silver-gilt "Dü-rer cups," done in Nuremberg about 1570-80 after a design exe-cuted by the painter Albrecht Dürer. The cups, displayed by S.J. At £120,000 (about $180,000) a piece they are not exactly cheap. But there comes a point in the art market where certain pieces become so rare - and so indispensable to self-respecting museums and top private collectors - that prices cease to bear a direct relationship to those of other objects in the same area.

Where 18th-century gold snuff boxes, 19th-century Faberge figurines and other costly trinkets are concerned, Wartski is the equivalent of SJ. Phillips - with an additional asset. Kenneth Snowman, Wartski's director, and chairman of the current Burlington House Fair, is the author of standard reference books on such subjects as "Eighteenth-Century Gold Boxes" published in 1956. In that work, he studied, among others, boxes from a major English collection that was on loan to the British Museum until this year.

Three months ago the collection became available for sale and Snowman, one jump ahead of the competition, bagged 32 18th-century gold boxes in one swoop. Thanks to this, the Burlington House show includes one of only four recorded gold boxes done around 1765 by Heinrich Taddel of Dresden in a technique known as "cell mosaic," The oval gold box is carved in champleve with semiprecious stones filling in the compartment to form a landscape design. Asked about the price, Snowman apologetically remarked, "I had to base myself on the Rothschild sale" i.e. the £140,000 paid for one of Taddel's boxes in June 1982 at taught, for he learned from all the Christie's. This was borne out by an extraordinary still life on a panel of a garland of roses hung from two nails, dated 1651 and signed by Alexander Marshall. William Drummond, the exhibitor, says only one other, much smaller, oil painting by Marshall is on record.

The still life is executed with supreme skill in an almost Surrealist mood. The petals of the roses, daintily colored in white with patches of yellow and marve, surpass even Flemish still lifes in their minute precision. The lightness of the com-

Simon Vouet (1590-1649), depicting her as the Magdalen. The chiaroscuro effects are derived from the Italian school founded by Caravaggio but the mood is utterly different. There is nothing theatrical about the woman, shown threemarters against a stormy mountainous landscape. It is a museum piece by the most demanding standards - very few Vouets come on the market.
Another extraordinary piece, displayed by Alex Wengraf, is a vase of the 1890s cast in bronze, its shape derived from Roman amphorae. Whirling blades of grass and plants are rippling over its surface, and huge insets of quartz crystals, amethysts and other uncut minerals appear to burst through its sides. The artist, J. Moreau, has signed his work, and so has the foundry that cast it in the 1890s, the Compagnie des Bronzes de Bruxelles. Again, the price, £15,000, is not wildly exaggerated.

Better still, an effort has been made to bring out rare objects in a moderate price range. The most striking revelation at Burlington House is that English decorative art

Banks Face Public-Relations Problem In Seeking Support for Their Rescue

NEW YORK — The big commercial banks that have engaged in heavy international lending to Third World countries are struggling to keep the world monetary system — and themselves — affoat by working with the International Monetary Fund and other public agencies at home and abroad.

The banks know they have a serious public relations problem in mustering public and Congressional support if a calamity is to be avoided. Much of the public does not want to see a "bailout" of major Hans H. Angermueller, vice chairman of Citicorp, recently said at a Londoo investment seminar, "Out of an almost Pavlovian sense of vindictiveness against banks — especially big ones — a great many people, particularly in the political and media fields, say that today's problems were created by exces-

'A great many people say that today's problems were created by excessive and sive and irresponsible private bank irresponsible lending. Nevertheless, he insisted, in trying to solve the developing world's liquidity problem, there is 00 real alternative to the continuing intermediation of the private commercial banking system working with the IMF. Mr. Angermueller did not try to glorify the banks' purpose. "You should understand," he said, "that the private commercial bankers are not acting out of any deep seated sense of public duty but rather out of self-interest.— enlightened self-interest, in my judgment. They want to get their earlier loans back, and to do so they have to decide to make new

Nor did he pretend that the banks had made no mistakes. Commercial banks have traditionally financed trade and short-term projects. But the banks, in the crunch of the oil-pricing shocks of 1974 and 1979 and the prolonged global recession, stepped beyond their traditional role by extending what has turned out to be long-term development credits.

The banks are now paying the price for their incursion into long-term development financing, Mr. Angermueller said, through low price-earnings multiples for their shares, large amounts of nonperforming loans and wide public criticism.

At Citicorp, loans to five Latin American countries - Argentina Brazil, Chile, Mexico and Venezuela —equal 174.5 percent of the bank's capital, which totaled nearly $6 billion at the end of 1982. Citicorp stock has a price-earnings ratio of 5. Among other large lenders to third-world countries, the Bank of America has a price-earnings ratio of 7; Chase Manhattan, 4; Morgan Guaranty, 6; Manufacturers Hanover, 5; Chemical Bank, 5; Continental Illinois, 6, and Bankers Trust, 6.

By companison, the average price-carnings ratio for all companies listed on the New York Stock Exchange is now 14, more than twice as high as for the big commercial banks with heavy foreign exposure.

Urgently Needed Funds

The risks to the banks' earnings and capital positions, if not to their survival, are aggravated by uncertainty over whether Congress will pass an $8.4 billion appropropriation for the IMF. It is urgently needed if the fund is to carry on its operations for a rescue of the debtor countries and,

Differing versions of the IMF bill have been passed by the Senate and House, but the legislation has been stymied by a clash between President Ronald Reagan and House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., Democrat of

Mr. O'Neill has insisted that Mr. Reagan apologize in writing for an attack made by the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee on 20 Democrats as "friends of communism" for supporting the IMF measure at the behest of the president. Business lobbyists report that a letter drafted at the Treasury for Mr. Reagan is expected to clarify his position. Whether Mr. Reagan will sign the letter or whether it will satisfy Mr. O'Neilf is another matter.

Banks are divided on supporting the IMF bill, with the big institutions stroogly for it and the smaller, regional banks hanging back. But because of perceived public and congressional resentment against the banks—partly because of the way that the banks used their power to push nto repealing interest tax withholding - the big banks made a strategic decision not to get out in front to fight for the IMF legislation. Instead the lobbying is being done on Capitol Hill by the Business Roundtable, the Emergency Committee for American Trade and the U.S.

Chamber of Commerce Their concern is that failure to pass the IMF bill would be extremely costly to U.S. trade with the developing countries and to the jobs of American workers. They point out that exports from this country now amount to more than $200 billion a year, with one-fourth going to the Third World. Of all the new jobs created in the past 12 years, 80 percent were export-related. And one out of seven jobs in the United States is tied BUENOS AIRES - The expansion plan for Daghe S.A., a pioneer computer dealership and service company, was supposed to be completed in 45 days. But that turned out to be just a bit too long range for doing business in Argentina's chaotic economy.

By late November the five-year-old company had planned to inaugurate one of the South American natioo's first all-purpose computer stores, stocked with home computers, accessories and a broad selec-

But as Gabriel Fagnilli, chief executive officer and part owner of Daghe, flew back from the United States with product orders two weeks ago, the project was unceremoniously derailed by the nation's foreign-debt

A ban on imports had joined a rampaging 350percent inflatioo rate, 45-percent-a-month interest rates, a plague of wildcat strikes and ever-changing state regulations to frustrate even the most routine Argentine business transactions,

Those gentlemen, more than anything, are incompetents," Mr. Fagnilli's younger brother and partner, Hernan, said in an outburst of bitter frustratioo with President Reynaldo Bignone's military government. "The only thing they know bow to do is run a' regiment, and that only in time of peace."

The trials of Daghe are only one example of the many woes facing Argentine businesses in the difficult interregnum between military and constitutional rule. Presidential elections are slated for Oct. 30.

The military, retreating from power after 71/2 years in power, has struggled to bring mounting economic disorder under control by, among other things, clamping controls on prices and interest rates, and forcing companies to give employees wage bonuses.

But with its authority on the wane, the government instead has alienated many businessmen, driving them increasingly into the already thriving underground economy simply to survive.

Widely used black markets offer otherwise unavailable foreign currencies and credit at double and triple the official exchange and interest rates, respectively. Tax evasioo is a time-honored business practice but the margins of on-the-books activity have decreased sharply with the economic crisis, businessmen said. Merchants systematically understate their earnings to avoid an 18-percent value-added tax. Businesses pay employees wages on and off the books to avoid social-benefit payments and to help the wage earner escape income taxes.

Ecocomists estimate that there have been more than $1 billion in illegal exports so far this year, all unrecorded in official statistics.

"An exporter who ships products out of the country illegally can change his earnings on the black market, doubling his profits," a business source said. "He also avoids paying export taxes."

The volatile political and economic climate has left most businessmen unwilling to be quoted by name. But merchants accuse their banks of rejecting checks for alleged imperfections only because the banks have liquidity problems. Bank of Japan Cuts a Key Rate 1/2 Point, to 5%

By Steve Lohr New York Times Service

TOKYO - With the value of the yen firming and the Japanese ecoo-omy in need of stimulus, the Bank of Japan said Friday that it is reducing the official discount rate by half a percentage point, to 5 per-cent. The cut, which takes effect Saturday, is the first reduction in the benchmark rate since Decem-

The discount-rate announcement came after the Japanese cabi-net earlier in the day had approved a package of measures intended to increase economic growth and re-spond to foreign criticism of Japan's trading practices.
As reported, the government plans to increase public-works spending by $8.1 billion and cut taxes by $5 billion during the oext 14 years. To ease frictions with its trading partners, Japan is to trim tariffs oo 44 items, accelerate by at least one year the scheduled tariff cuts on 1,268 goods that were agreed at the 1979 Tokyo Round of multilateral trade oegotiations, provide import financing for man-ufactured goods and consider ways to open up its capital markets. The discount-rate cut had been widely expected by foreign-currency traders, and it has already been reflected in the yen's value. In fact, the yen strengthened against the U.S. dollar despite the central bank's decision, closing at 232.10 yen, compared with 233.15 on Thursday, Over the past two years, the strength of the dollar against the yen has restrained Japan from reducing its interest rates to stimulate economic growth, A weak yen makes Japan's exports cheaper in foreign markets, thus enlarging its already buge trade surpluses with other nations. Yet with U.S. interest rates easing recently, the yen has firmed. In mid-August, the yen-dollar rate was as high as 247.

The discount-rate cut was welcomed by economists and corporate executives, who said it would help boost private investment, though not strongly.

"The half-percent reduction is better than nothing, but it is still oot enough," said Masaru Yoshi-tomi, chief economist of the Economic Planning Agency.

Mr. Yoshitomi pointed out that when the discount rate was lowered in 1981, consumer inflation was at 4.2 percent a year, while the current inflation rate is 1.5 percent. Thus, for the past two years, inflationadjusted interest rates have been

Atari Is to Postpone Most Shipments Of 2 Computers Until After Christmas

LOS ANGELES (LAT) — Atari Inc., the troubled electronics unit of Warner Communications Inc., which has had losses of $536 million so far this year, will delay most shipments of two new home computers until after the crucial Christmas selling season, company officials said.

"They're in trouble," said Lee Isgur, a securities analyst for New Yorkbased Paine Webber Mitchell Hatchins Inc., who said he had received assurances Tuesday from Warner that shipments of the aew, high-performance 1400 XL and 1450 XLD home computers would begin by month's end.

Unless Atari can quickly escalate its shipments of two new lower-priced computers called the 600 XL and 800 XL, Mr. Isgur said Thursday, "I think they're washed up in terms of computers."

Don Kingsborough, the chief of Atari's sales and distribution, said Atari would have shipped about 100,000 units of its two lower-priced home computers by week's end, and does plan to begin shipping the 1400 XLD computers in limited quantities during December. The company attributed the nearly two-month delay in large shipments to "fairly normal" problems in making new products.

Dow Jones Wins Fight Over Average SPRINGFIELD, Illinois (AP) — Use of the Dow Jones industrial average for futures trading at the Chicago Board of Trade would violate

Dow Jones & Co.'s proprietary rights over the average, the Illinois Supreme Court ruled Friday.

The ruling will prevent the Board of Trade from establishing a futures contract based on the average, the U.S. stock market's best known measure, which averages 30 industrial stocks.

Thomas P. Cunningham, chairman of the CBT, said there were no plans to ask for a rehearing or appeal the decision. He said the exchange on Wednesday completed an agreement with the American Stock Exchange to establish futures contracts based on the Amex Major Market Index and the Amex Market Value Index. Options contracts on those stock indexes already are traded at the Amex.

W. German Bank Credit Increases

FRANKFURT (Reuters) — September bank credit to the private sector grew at the same high speed as it did in Angust, rising by 15.1 billion marks ($5.85 billion), compared with 9.7 billion DM a year earlier, the Bundesbank said Friday,

Commenting on the latest money-supply figures, it said the expansion of short-dated credit quickened again at a seasonally adjusted rate compared with preceding months, while growth of long-dated bank credit slowed, but still remained high. In the past six months, bank credit to the private sector rose at a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 9 percent.

Brazilian Congress's Repudiation Of Wage Law Threatens New Loans

By Martin Baron

Los Angeles Times Service NEW YORK - The Brazilian egislature's repudiation of a wage law threatens to disrupt efforts by the International Monetary Fund and international banks to assemble $11 billion in new loans for the country, banking sources say.

_SWMGTRENO" und seine Leser

Ein großer Tell unserer Leser bezieht "SWINGTREND" von Anfang an, seit mehr als 15 Jahren. Stellvertrotend für die Ansicht dieser Leser veröffentlichen wir Auszüge aus einer Zuschrift, die unaufgefordert einging: "Seit 15 Jah-ren beziehe ich ununterbrochen ihren Börsendians "SWINGTREND". In dieser Zeit habe ich hintereinander, teilweise auch gleichzig, fest alle bekannten Börsendien-ste bezogen, ihren Dienst habe ich am längsten abonniert, weil er der einzige ist, der nach einem objektiven System arbeitet. Besonders geschätzt habe Ich immer, daß Sie als einziger Börsenberater ihre Empfehlungen stels zu Ende verfolgten, alle Schieflagen solort korrigierten und da-durch größere Verluste verhinderten." Prof. Dr. H. G., Köln enjoying a rare bargain-the whole world in just a few tightly written, fact-packed pages. You're reading a product created by scores of journalists working day and night from dozens of distant datelines to bring you a compact compilation which can be purchased for the price of a cup of coffee.

But why not double the bargain? Enjoy twice as many newspapers with double the headlines, business trends, candid commentary, high fashion and comic strip hi-jinks, exciting sports and puzzling crosswords.

By subscribing to the International Herald Tribune for six months or a year, you save almost half the newsstand price on each copy. Up to 42% off, to be precise. Twice as many Tribs for your money.

Join the global who's who of thought-leader readers who turn to each morning's Trib for the latest in objectively reported world news, briskly written opinion, the day's closing business tabulations, buy-and-sell reports from the interna-tional market-place, at-the-stadium recaps of just-completed matches, what's happening in the world of culture—and all in an international perspective.

Double the value of the Trib by halving its price.

Subscribe now so you don't miss a single issue. Major credit cards accepted. Just fill out the coupon below and mail. For maximum savings, subscribe for a full year. This cut-price subscription offer is for new subscribers only.

Selected by Anne Tyler with Shannon Ravenel. word "spendthrift" to mean "profligate" with material and "generous" in conception. With an introduction by Anne Tyler, 332 pp.

It's a good idea, surely, to think of a story as spendthrift, as holding back nothing that belongs, yet I wonder at her applying that word to the Raymond Carver story in this collection. The story, titled "Where I'm Calling From," is about a woman chimney sweep and her alcoholic husband, and Tyler asks, "Why didn't Raymond Carver save up his glorious lady chimney sweep and wrench a novel out of her?"

I can think of several reasons. I was surprised, for example, to find myself reading even a short story about a chimney sweep. While it's an honest job, I feel a natural skepticism about a chimney sweep as a subject for a short story. Something tells me that Carver expects us to care about this character, not in spite of her chimney sweeping, but because of it. She's an oddity, a conversation piece, almost a grotesque. Behind the story is the fact that Carver himself probably thinks it's surprising to read about a chimmey sweep. To my mind, he's exploiting her in separates, for her, "a wonderful short story from a chimney sweep. I merely good one." She says, "it seems to me that . a convoluted way.

Occasionally, Tyler is willing to forgive an other wise undistinguished story for the sake of a "still moment," "Change of Season" by James Bond is so spendthrift or profligate in describing machinery that you almost have to be a mechanic to find the metaphor in it Carolyn Chute's "Ollie, oh . . . seems unconvincing and terribly melodramatic to me. It's about a widow who first freezes off her fingertips, toes and ears by laying, in below-zero weather, under her dead husband's truck. Later on, she is run over and killed when she repeats this act As the children throw themselves on their dead mother's body, Chute offers us this sentence, "As with blueberry jam their lingers were dipped a sticky purple.

Woiwode's "First Born." "Mistress" is about a man who has an elegant wife and a mistress who is sloppy on the surface but so elegant beneath it that she can hardly bear the untidiness of human love. An adulterous affair, she observes, offers us "a secret context out of reality." It's the kind of love about which there's nothing to do. It exists without generating workable suggestions, except for the original impulse.

"First Bom" is a fine study of a shaky marriage. in which the wife is about to have a baby that her husband is not sure is his. When she loses the baby, what they learn about love and about themselves is splendidly evoked. I just wish, though, that the husband had not kicked his pregnant wife down a flight of stairs. Even romanticism has its limits.

Yorker, and 11 are by women. I would explain the preponderance of women by saying that Tyler is prejudiced - not necessarily in favor of women, but of the kind of stories they seem more likely to write at this stage of American history.

Some of these selections appeared to me to have very little action or drama, until I realized that the ama lies, not in what the characters do, but in what the author does - in the method of his or her unfolding. In the same way, the narrative, such as it is, often amounts to a narration of technique—the author's technique. Among other generalizations, I might add that many of the things that American writers recently took some pains to eliminate from their stories—ordinary details, for example seem to be reappearing. I suppose you could call that redemption if you look at i) in a certain light.

My favorites in "The Best American Stories 1983" are Laurie Colwin's "Mistress" and Larry

Grandma, Broker, Ski Champ: They're All in the Running

By Neil Amdur New York Times Service

New York Times Service

NEW YORK — Six years ago, Mary Rodriguez was so intimidated at being seen running that she had her husband drive her to a park near their home and wait while she completed her modest training runs.

"I got into running through a New York Road Runners Club exercise class on a Sanurday morning" she recalled. "I couldn't even run a city block. It was embarrassing. The first run the graning teacher said to me. Thou't give That first week, the exercise teacher said to me, 'Don't give up —you can't expect to undo 35 years of inactivity in one week."

On Wednesday, the 61-year-old Rodrignez, who has four children and seven grandchildren, stood in line with thousands of other runners at the Sheraton Centre in Manhattan to register for Sunday's New York City Marathon. Since enrolling in that exercise class, Rodriguez has run 185 races, including 10 marathons; four weeks ago, she went to Spain, ran in a 100-kilometer race and finished

"I'm very proud of it, too," said Rodriguez, who will run in New York's five-borough race for the fourth time and will receive a New York Road Runners Club senior award later this year.

"I remember Mary," Fred Lebow, the marathon race director and president of the Road Runners Club, said after spotting her at the registration. "She was a matronly, dumpy-looking woman who looked older than her age at the time. Now, she looks trim and younger than her age."

Standing in line for identifying numbers and assorted race material has become as much of a ritual for runners before the New York Marathon as camping out for World Series or Wimbledon tickets. Last year, Jerry LeRoy, 36 of Irvington, New Jersey, was ninth in line on the first day of registration; Wednesday, be arrived at 8:42 A.M., more than three hours early, beating out William Jones and James Thomas for the front of the line.

"The only time we see each other is here," the 38-yearold Jones said, nodding toward LeRoy. "But it's good practice for Sunday, because we're going to be doing a lot of standing before the race."

Jack Colwell, a 43-year-old Manhattan restaurant manager, took up running 18 months ago because he needed a "positive" influence to overcome an addiction to drugs and alcohol. "It led to this," said Colwell, who finished his

Jean-Claude Killy may not be as intense these days as he was in 1968, but he's still going for it.

first marathon in 4 hours 30 minutes last year and hopes to break 4 hours on Sunday. The line reflected the diverse interests and occupations of the 17,000 entrants. Some runners showed up in jeans or running clothes; Steve Frank, 37, of Darien, Connecticut, a stockbroker, wore a business suit, temporarily leaving clients' calls and stock quotations to his secretary. "I had no choice but to get in early and wait," Frank said. "I don't like to do it on Saturday."

About 4,000 foreign runners, a record, also began arriving. Emily Killy, the 12-year-old daughter of Jean-Clande Killy, the former Olympic skiing champion who will run here Sunday, phoned her father from France on Tuesday night.

"Did you win?" she asked, thinking the marathon had been held on Tuesday and that her father, who won three skiing gold medals at Grenoble, France, in 1968, had again triumphed in his debut in a running race.

"It was my first marathon of the week," quipped the 40-year-old Killy.

Killy switched from cycling to running one year ago

during a worldwide business tour that covered 26 cities in 28 days. "A friend of mine who was traveling with me said we didn't do something for exercise, we'd get killed by the trip," Killy recounted.

Killy's decision to run in the New York Marathon developed as a bet among a dozen friends and business associates, most of whom are also entered. Over the last year, Killy said he has run 174 times and covered 1,630 kilometers, the longest distance a 22-mile training run that he said took "a short 3 hours."

"Til probably take $10 with me on Sunday for a cab if I need it," be said, hoping to average 10 kilometers an hour and simply finish the 26.2-mile race.

"The subways are free for anyone with a number,"

Lebow interjected. Said Killy: "I never use the subways in New York."

Last summer, Julie Ridge, a 26-year-old actress, became the first person to swim twice around Manhattan. One week ago, she completed an 18-mile training run in preparation for her first marathon. "It's something I'm not sure I'll ever do again," said

Ridge, who is searching for new marathon swimming challenges next summer. "But I want to do it once." Because she has become involved in swimming, triathlons and running, Ridge remained undecided about what T-shirt would best symbolize her status in Sunday's race. Killy said he turned down offers to wear certain T-shirts from sponsors because there would be too many runners

"What do you think Avery Brundage would say about that?" someone asked of the commercialism.

Killy smiled, recalling frequent fends over amateurism and his gold medals with Brundage, the former president of the International Olympic Committee, who is now

"I told him," Killy said, "If you want the medals back, you come to Val d'Isere and get them. I've got a couple of good rifles there and I'll show you what we do in the

Lions Facing Redskins; Riggins Iffy

Compiled by Our Staff From Disposches WASHINGTON — The good news for the Detroit Lions is that John Riggins may not play Sunday. The bad news is that Alvin Garrett may be in the lineup for the Washington Redskins.

Riggins, one of the National Football League's most punishing runners, has taken quite a bearing lately. The Redskin fullback, last year's most valuable player in the Super Bowl, has gained 660 yards and scored 10 touchdowns this season. But he also has a painfully inflamed sciatic nerve in his right hip and was hospitalized for treatment at midweek.

Detroit remembers him well. He rushed for 119 yards when the teams met last Jan. 8 in a firstround National Conference playoff game - but the Lions no doubt have even more vivid memories of Garrett. He replaced the injured Art Monk in that game and caught six passes, including touchdown re-ceptions of 21, 21 and 27 yards in the Redskins' 31-7 romp.

Monk is healthy now but fellow wide receiver Charlie Brown is sidelined with a bruised ankle, so Garrett's back in the lineup. (Las Vegas oddsmakers favor the Redskins by 8 points.)

The Buffalo Bills are is alone atop the American Conference East at 5-2 and play at home against the 3-4 New England Patriots. But Buffalo Coach Kay Stephenson notes: "There's always been a special rivalry between the Patriots and the Bills, and it's going to be a doglight no matter what the

Both teams are coming off big mes, the Rills ripping Baltimore, 30-7, and the Pats shocking San Diego, 37-21. New England's Steve Grogan was the hot quarterback earlier this year, but the Bills' Joe Ferguson is now; be has thrown

In New York, there's a meeting of two teams in trouble, the Atlanta Falcons (2-5) and the 3-4 New York Jets. The Falcons' biggest asset has been quarterback Steve Bartwas willing to risk his 1982 changes kowski, who shares the league passing lead with Green Bay's Lynn Dickey. "Steve has put us into position to win every game," said Coa-ch Dan Henning. "He hasn't the NFC Central Division, yet both

Chuck Studley's first home game as Houston's interim coach. His debut ended with a 34-14 pounding in Minnesota. (Chiefs by 31/2.)

The NFL's other victoryless team also trudges home this weekend, the Tampa Bay Bucca hoping they can end their skid against the New Orleans Saints the way they did in 1977. Back then, in the Bucs' second season, the losing streak had hit 26 before they upended the Saints, 33-14. (Saints by Marc Wilson will replace quarterback Jim Plunkett for the Los Angeles Raiders against the Dallos Cowboys in a battle of divisional leaders in Dallas. The Raiders have turned the ball over 17 times in their last three games, two of which resulted in losses. That sloppy play warranted the change by Los Angeles coach Tom Flores.

"Marc deserves the chance," said Flores. "I just felt that the way things have been going the last few weeks, it was good for everyone." Plunkett has thrown 10 interceptions in the last three games. "Maybe it's something that needs to be done," he said. "Maybe Marc will give us something we haven't had —more consistency."

The 5-2 Raiders have yielded the fewest yards in the NFL, but the Dallas offense is coming off its fin-est effort of the season. In their 37rout of Philadelphia, the Cowboys had possession for 43:43, tied a club record with 32 first downs and amassed 522 yards against what was then the National Conference's No. 1 defensive unit,

The Green Bay Packers (4-3) are at home against the 5-2 Minus

(Cowboys by 4.)

The Packer offense is among the best the league. Lynn Dickey is having a magnificent season and is tied for the NFC passing lead with Atlanta's Bartkowski. Wide receivers James Lofton and John Jefferson and tight end Paul Coffman all rank within the National Conference's top 15 pass-catchers. The Packers run sparingly but effective-ly. (Packers by 2.)

The 5-2 Pittsburgh Steelers, on the road against the Seattle Seahawks, boast a strong defense and quarterback Cliff Stoudt, who finally played well last week as Terry Bradshaw continues his elbow rehabilitation. The Steelers lead the league with 31 sacks, while the Seahawks are seeking the first 5-3 start in the club's 8-year history. Seattle rookie Curt Warner leads the American Conference in rushing, but both the offensive and defensive units rank 13th in the 14-team

The Steelers will be without rookie defensive lineman Gabriel Rivera, who was critically injured in an automobile accident Thursday night. (Even.)

Against the Cardinals Monday night in St. Louis, New York Giant Coach Bill Parcells will bench quarterback Scott Brunner in favor of Jeff Rutledge. Brunner beat out Phil Simms for the starting job to open the season, but aside from a 300-yard passing effort against San Diego be has been ineffective. Simms suffered a season-ending thumb injury Oct. 9 against Philadelphia, and Brunner's play has continued to slide; he accounted for five turnovers last week.

Rutledge, who posted the best exhibition statistics of the three, hasn't thrown a regular-season pass since New York acquired him from the Los Angeles Rams before the 1982 season. The Giants and Cardinals are both 2-5 on the year. (Giants by 2.)

Elsewhere on Sunday, Chicago will be at Philadelphia (Eagles by 4), Miami at Baltimore (Dolphins 3½), San Diego at Denver (Chargers by 2) and, in games rated tossups, Cleveland at Cincinnati and San Francisco at the Los Ange les Rams. (AP, UPI).

PARIS - After Nelson Piquet won his first world drivers champi-conship in Las Vegas in 1981, he disappeared on a three-week vacation.

His boss, Brabham owner and Grand Prix entrepreneur Bernard Ecclestone, was hornified. In Piquet's shoes, he would have been on the first plane home to Brazil, starting to turn his championship into hard sponsorship cash.

Not that Piquet disdains money -his latest contract with Brabham is said to bring him $1.5 million a year - or the things it can buy. He drives a sleek Mercedes, enjoys himself on a powerful, streamlined 55-foot yacht usually based in Monte Carlo and travels in a priyate jet, his baggage a sample change of his usual jeans and T-

This year, Frenchman Alain
Prost made a similar error as he tried to take the lead from Piquet in the Dutch Grand Prix, sending Pijust's Brabham into the tire barriers and out of the race. It probably cost Piquet victory and at the time limmed his chances for the season

U.S. and Russians Set Hockey Series Ibdued Press Inter

ST. LOUIS — Officials of the Russian national hockey team and the U.S. Olympic squad have ver-bally agreed to play a four-game exhibition series in December. Dave Ferroni, public relations director for the U.S. team, said Thursday that he expects a final agreement to be signed shortly. Plans call for games on Dec. 9 in Lake Placid, New York, on Dec. 11 in Bloomington, Minnesota, on Dec. 16 in St. Louis and on Dec. 18 at a site still to be determined. A series between the Russians and U.S. Olympic team, serving as a prelude to the February's Winter Olympics in Yugoslavia had apparently fallen through after the Sept. 1 Korean airliner disaster. But Ferromi said the U.S. Amateur Hockey Association learned that the Russians were still interested in playing, and negotiations began.

after his remark about the Jews, the blacks, the woman and the cripple. I had to be indignant." Being indignant is one thing.

But why did you have to suggest a resolution in Congress that Watt had to go?" "I wasn't thinking too clearly.

Besides I was hoping Reagan would hang tough and keep Watt to placate the conservatives."

"Well, we're really up a tree. You know and I know when you talked about a nuclear freeze, the MX missile, the B-1 bomber and Reaganomics people's eyes glazed over. But every time you mentioned what Watt was doing to the country you got a standing ovation. They didn't stand on their feet; they stood on

"Yes, but when the president realized Watt was going to be overwhelmingly censured by the Senate get rid of him. What the devil were the Democratic Party leaders thinking of?" "Watt could have done a lot of damage to the country between now and 1984," the senator said weakly.

"That's what we were counting on," the campaign manager said. "We were going to run clips of him every night during the last week of the campaign. He offended practically every group in the nation."

"What about running against Bill Clark? He said he was going to follow Watt's policy." "Nobody knows who Clark is. He could strip-mine Yosemite National Park and people wouldn't know who did it. Besides he never opens his mouth." Why don't we run against Da-

She Has Reached the 'Splendor of Age,' But at 83 Is Still Center Stage

By Vicky Elliott

International Herald Tribune

Tinstructions to go with Marpreface says, "should be played reached the splendor of age. The play has been conceived and written because of this splendor."

It is a short piece, 75 minutes, about a great actress who is losing glyph, chiseled and indelible. her memory. "I call it a dramatic symphony," says Madeleine Ren-Bulle Ogier, who in the play may and, who is the actress and 83 or may not be her granddaughter, now. "It is about someone haunted by love and by death." The dressing room at the Théâtre du Rond Point on the more precise — the question is Champs-Elysées has a small trav-made to seem presumptuous cling altar that looks as if it was set up in all the nine Parisian theaters colonized by the troupe Renaud founded in 1946 with her husband, Jean-Louis Barrault, It has a flurry of flowers and birds in gilt and porcelain assembled on the small marquetry dresser that Renaud bought "as a keepsake" with the small lump sum they gave her when she left the Come-die Française, after 127 roles. If she likes objects to remember things by, Renaud never wanted to write her memoirs, of the career that she began as an 18-year-old-ingénue in ringlets and lace, play-ing the heroines of Pierre de Marivaux and Alfred de Musset, then as cupid-lipped leading lady of the films of the 1930s, and then in such roles as Samuel Beckett's Winnie in "Happy Days," buried up to her waist with her umbrella, her handbag and her toothbrush.

"I always tell the journalists who come to see me," she says, sitting up straight and tiny, "that I haven't the memory of the past." She can remember her parts and who she played them with she says, but no dates, no facts, "And anyway," she adds, she whom the French consider invented the story of living happily ever after, "either they are painful memo-

D ARIS - There are some stern working. There were 35 consective days of rehearsal for Duras's guerite Duras's new play. "The first theater production, "Savan-role of the character called Madenah Bay," which worked an interleine in 'Savannah Bay,'" the esting transmutation on the prose of Paris critics: their panegyric on only hy an actress who has Renaud's performance read like poems. The newspaper Le Monde said her voice was as natural as a loaf of bread sitting on a table, and compared her face to a hiero-

> and she says the younger actress also shares with her a certain way of acting. She isn't going to be for that is for the critics to say. One admirer, Henry de Montherlant, whose first play "The Dead Queen," she starred in, said of her: "A perfect, delicate diction; the instrument and the artist a seamless whole. . . . Patience and effort are smoothed away; art masking its art."

Renaud herself has said, "The essence lies not in resembling the character, but in a certain way of feeling." She doesn't express it very well, though she abdicates from this responsibility with great dignity. One feels that she is happier when words are put into her mouth and that she has always preferred to leave the talking to her "dear Jean-Louis." She has never played Phèdre or Lady Macbeth; in 1928, when she refused the part of Joan of Arc in Carl Dreyer's film because she didn't want to have her hair shaved off, she was more at home in a crinoline. But that wasn't the whole story. After her fair share of classics, after the films she made with Jean Gahin, Claude Dauphin and Jean-Pierre Aumont, "I just went peacefully on." She was already a star, and married with a child by the director Charles Granval, when she was cast in a film opposite the firebrand Barrault, 10

Renaud begins to recall the nomadic days; the time she sat next to André Malraux at dinner, and de Gaulle's minister of culture suggested she and her husband take over the theater at the Odéon ries, and you don't want to think years her junior. Their marriage and call it the Théâtre de France, of them, or they are so deliriously in 1940 was a turning point: And then May 1968, those tragic the crinolines began to spend days, she calls them, when "those Theatre, a library and conference students, those boys and girls, if center and home "for that interyou like," took over the Odéon national country that is called the and found the place where the costumes were and pillaged and burned them. And the Theatre d'Orsay — "We built it with our the company played almost evown hands," luckily with a colerywhere but China — in Tokyo, own hands," luckily with a col-

The lease on the Theatre du Rond-Point runs until 2000, and Renand says, of all their theaters, she feels most at home there.

A tousled head, Polichinelle, looks round the door. Barrault, 72, resolutely Bohemian, his shirt still open at the neck, looks in on his wife, in her navy dress with its prim white collar and her little altar of keepsakes. Three teams of American and Japanese climbers reached the summit of Mount Everest within hours of each other Oct. 8, in an imprecedented triple-conquest of the 29,282-foot (8,848-meter) mountain, according to Harayuki Endo, of Tokyo, who was with one of two Japanese teams climbing without bottled oxygen. Endo. 36. said Friday that the U.S. team: part of a 14-member expedition climbing the formerly unconquered east face of Everest from Tibet and led by James Morrisey of San Francisco, was followed to the top 80 minutes later by two members of Japan's Sangaku Doshikai expedition, who had climbed the difficult southwest face. Endo reached the top. 10 minutes later and met the three Americans. His two colleagues, who arrived 20 minutes after Endo, died during the descent. . . Meanwhile, the Nepalese Ministry of Tourism in Katmandu said a U.S. team of six men and five women climbers hoping to put the first American woman on the summit of Everest had abandoned its climb . . . Edward Vail of Malibu, California, said in Beijing Friday that six of his companions conquered the 27,600-foot mountain in southwest China's Sichuan province, known mofficially the summit, scaling an 80-degree near-vertical face for the final 400 feet, using a free-climbing tech-nique that relies on a minimum of equipment and a lot of exertion.

Six years after he was pronounced "in disgrace and sh by a federal court, Richard Helms, former director of the Central Intelligence Agency, was honored by President Ronald Reagan Thursday with the National Security Medal. The ceremony was shrouded from public display, but a brief White House announcement took note of the "exceptionally meritorious sertor pleaded no contest in 1977 to charges of failing to tell Congress the truth about the CIA's covert funneling of money to opponents of President Salvador Allende Gossens of Chile.
